Re: Bartlett, et al. v. Société Générale de Banque au Liban S.A.L., et al.

Dear Mr. Berger:

We are writing to follow up on our Rule 26(f) conference last Friday. During the conference, the parties discussed the central issue of Lebanese bank secrecy in this case. Due to bank secrecy's likely fundamental impact on discovery, we indicated that we thought it would be best to defer initial Rule 26(a) disclosures – which will be far less meaningful given the import of the bank secrecy issue – and we remain willing to do so. During the call, the parties predicated their discussion on the draft discovery plan that Plaintiffs' counsel furnished to defense counsel two weeks ago. Based on our discussion, we have refined our proposal and attempted to combine the alternatives we discussed in a way we think is more efficient. To that end, we are attaching the two lists that you requested: a proposed subset of Defendants' alleged customers (Exhibit A hereto) and a proposed initial Request for the Production of Documents ("RFP") (Exhibit B hereto).

Under our proposal – with the parties' consent – the Court would issue Letters Rogatory to the applicable Lebanese authorities for a discrete subset of customers in order to establish, in an efficient manner, whether the Lebanese authorities will waive their objections to disclosures. As Exhibit A indicates, the subset of alleged customers includes commercial entities, non-governmental entities, and individuals, comprising alleged customers of all Defendants, thereby providing a representative sample of what full discovery would look like. We believe Exhibit A could be converted into Letters Rogatory expeditiously and that the Lebanese authorities could, depending on how quickly the Court issued the Letters Rogatory, be expected to respond by the end of February 2022.¹

In parallel, we propose to serve an initial RFP that is substantially reflected in Exhibit B and reflects a much wider scope of initial discovery. Defendants would then interpose any objections they have, including as to scope, relevance, etc., in addition to bank secrecy. Once Defendants either receive a response from the Lebanese authorities or an agreed upon time has elapsed without a response, Plaintiffs would file a motion to compel (subject to the response from the Lebanese authorities). Defendants could raise any objections to the RFP they deem appropriate, including Lebanese bank secrecy. Thereafter, the Court would adjudicate the dispute and issue a production order, if appropriate.

The advantage of proceeding on parallel tracks is that the parties can identify and narrow any objections, including as to scope and relevance, unrelated to bank secrecy, while the Letters Rogatory process proceeds. The briefing on a motion to compel and the Court's ultimate adjudication of those issues would also provide the parties with considerable guidance on the scope of discovery at a relatively early stage. If Defendants' bank secrecy objections are overruled, the production order (and the decision underlying it) would provide the Lebanese authorities with additional insights as to the import and nature of the judicial proceedings before the Court. Of course, if the Court ruled in Defendants' favor on Lebanese bank secrecy, that would also relieve Defendants' discovery burdens considerably.

Moreover, this approach would not place any practical discovery burden on Defendants because the RFP would relate solely to records which would implicate Defendants' prospective bank secrecy objections. The schedule would look something like this – though the proposed dates are merely for discussion purposes:

1. Motion to join new parties or amend pleadings	N/A
2. Plaintiffs serve Initial RFP (Exhibit B)	November 15, 2021
3. Defendants submit Letters Rogatory as to the 20 individuals and entities listed in Exhibit A	November 19, 2021

Letter to Mitchell R. Berger, Esq.

4. Defendants serve objections to Initial RFP	January 15, 2022
5. Deadline for response from Lebanese Authorities to Letters Rogatory (60 days from issuance by the District Court)	February 28, 2022
6. If Lebanese Authorities do not respond/decline to grant waivers based on Letters Rogatory: Deadline for Plaintiffs to file motion to compel as to Initial RFP	No later than March 14, 2022
7. Deadline to file opposition brief to motion to compel	April 11, 2022
8. Deadline to file reply brief to motion to compel	May 3, 2022

On an unrelated note, we look forward to receiving your collective mark-up of the proposed protective order, and we are available to discuss it, the revised draft discovery plan set forth above, and the related Lebanese bank secrecy issue at your convenience.

Sincerely,

/s/ Gary M. Osen
